BUNKYO GAKUIN UNIVERSITY

Bunkyo Gakuin University provides a learning environment in which a student can major in one specific area while sampling from multiple other related areas. As students open their minds to new learning opportunities they will expand their own horizons, build ties with other people, and provide themselves with the tools to open up their own boundless hidden potential.

Bunkyo Gakuin History

The history of Bunkyo Gakuin dates back to 1924 when our founder, Ishiko Shimada, established an academy with the objective of “providing women with the skills to become independent.”

Learning that spreads from “women” to “humans”.

We have established a system that serves as an entry point to a gender-equal society.

»»» B’s Vision 2035

Towards further evolution. Four visions for BUNKYO GAKUIN UNIVERSITY

In a world that is becoming increasingly globalized and diversified, we aim to continue to be a university that practices our founding spirit of “independence and coexistence.” Bunkyo Gakuin University upholds “B’s vision” and continues to support students by creating a better field of learning.

Developing global human resources with individuality!

Global Citizen

- Bunkyo GCI
- Road to Eurasian Civilizations
- Multilateral Students exchange program

We aim to gain a variety of experiences both in Japan and abroad, develop an international perspective, and become people who can live in harmony with the world with communication skills in every sense of the word.

Developing human resources who can feasibly take on challenges even in difficult situations

Stress Management

- Gokaido Walk
- Practical Training & Experiments
- Internships
- Field Work

Through practical learning, students gain first-hand experience of collaborating with others with different abilities and ways of thinking, and acquiring skills such as communication skills that lead to stress tolerance.

Your life partner forever

THE FACULTY OF FOREIGN STUDIES

Hongo Campus

The Faculty of Foreign Studies emphasizes the English Communication Department with two programs offering four specialized courses. Small class sizes, caring faculty, and staff characterize the educational programs. Students choose between the International Business Program or the International Liberal Arts Program before entering the department. In the International Liberal Arts Program, students choose a course aligned with their interests and goals before their third year.

The department aims for graduates to develop strong English communication skills through various opportunities and facilities on campus. They also strive to make students proficient in computer skills through IT education programs.

The goals include students having extensive knowledge about the world, being proficient in their native language, English, and a third language (Korean, Chinese, French, or Spanish). Additionally, students learn IT skills, general knowledge, and specialized information from professionals in their preferred course, preparing them for their future.

Department of English Communication

International Business Communication Major

■ International Business Course

The International Business Course prepares students for diverse global business roles with English language skills and practical knowledge in business administration, marketing, accounting, and laws, suitable for those interested in studying abroad or pursuing graduate studies.

International Liberal Arts Communication Major

■ The English Education Course

The English Education Course prepares students for careers as English teachers in various fields. It covers English education theories, teaching materials, methods, and offers hands-on teaching experience opportunities.

■ International Cooperation Course

The International Cooperation Course teaches about cooperation, partnerships, human rights, and business in the global arena. It aims to cultivate global citizenship and provides fieldwork experiences with local and international NGOs and social businesses in countries like Cambodia and Nepal.

■ International Culture Course

The International Culture Course covers politics, history, literature, language, and culture of America, Britain, France, and Japan. It includes fieldwork opportunities in these countries to enhance cultural understanding and prepare students to be global citizens.

The Faculty of Business Administration

Hongo Campus

The Faculty of Business Administration provides two departments that enable students to learn about basic theories and gain skills ideally suited to their future career paths.

Department of Business Administration and Communication

- To start a business or become a manager
- To learn about management
- Learn how to strengthen your organization and team
- Learn about accounting and taxation
- To improve presentation skills

Department of Marketing and Design

- To acquire the ability to analyze data
- To create new services, products, and values
- To acquire the ability to communicate using IT and communicate visually
- To improve their ability to express themselves in advertisements and public relations

Department of Business Administration and Communication

The department of Business Administration and Communication provides students with the opportunity to learn about planning strategies and marketing, as well as financial and accounting issues. In each of these specialized areas, students gain deep knowledge and understanding of respective topics. They acquire skills and learn about theories that will be useful in a real-world business environment.

Department of Marketing and Design

The department of Marketing and Design provide students with the opportunity to study and research specialist skills such as computer graphics, visual contents and contents production, including information processing and network technologies. These programs assist students in acquiring advanced computer and network skills and an understanding of the theories of business administration.

THE FACULTY OF HUMAN STUDIES

Hongo Campus

Fujimino Campus

The objective of the Faculty of Human Studies is to nurture human beings who will learn to deeply understand those around them and who will attempt to realize a society that embraces co-existence. To achieve this objective, in addition to engaging in learning and research in a variety of specialty fields, students can acquire a variety of practical skills that are incorporated into practical exercises and presentations in classes and lectures. An emphasis is also placed on cooperation with communities in addition to students' participation in class activities.

On campus, there are several facilities, that serve as a unique educational platform for students to enhance their practical skills, while at the same time helping to promote activities that vitalize the local community. These facilities include the parenting support center "Furatto Bunkyo", the Bunkyo Informal Community Service Center(BICS), the Clinical Psychology Center, and the Social Welfare Center. The faculty of Human Studies is comprised of four departments: Sociology and Communication Department, Child Development Department, Social Welfare and Social Work Department, and Psychology Department. These four departments each aim to support the development of students as individuals with variety and an independent spirit and provide them with skills and knowledge in specialty areas.

The Child Development Department

The department with over 40 years of history offers an Early Childhood Education (ECE) program focusing on preparing students to become effective teachers for children up to age 12. The program includes practical experience working with children, emphasizes psychology education, instructional methods, and communication skills. Students learn about child education, early childhood development, special needs, nutrition, children's literature, and child psychology.

The Social Welfare & Social Work Department

When creating a society for happy co-existence, social welfare is crucial. Bunkyo Gakuin University's Social Welfare and Social Work Department blends theoretical and practical courses, supports students in attaining national qualifications, and encourages community engagement. Research seminars help students develop expertise, producing social workers equipped to adapt to societal changes.

Department of Sociology & Communications

When creating a society for happy co-existence, social welfare is crucial. Bunkyo Gakuin University's Social Welfare Department offers practical and theoretical courses, supports students in obtaining national qualifications, and encourages community engagement. Research and seminars help students become adaptable social workers for a changing society.

The Psychology Department

The Psychology Department aims to train experts in psychology to contribute to society. It offers education in fundamentals, physiological experiments, psychometric testing, data analysis, and clinical physiological psychology. The department provides advanced lab facilities and experienced teaching staff for research. The Graduate School of Human Studies offers a master's degree in psychology for further studies.

The Faculty of Health Science Technology

Hongo Campus | Fujimino Campus

The Faculty of Health Science Technology aims to provide an education that will nurture the knowledge, qualities, and skills required of medical technicians to fulfill their role as part of a medical team and contribute competently to the process of patient recovery and rehabilitation. The programs include small class sizes and the opportunity to study abroad in Europe, the United States, or in Canada, as well as allow for an open curriculum including both social welfare and psychology.

The Faculty of Health Science Technology is comprised of four departments. Each of the departments benefit from departmental staff who possess a wealth of knowledge and experience in their respective specialties. Each department has first-rate facilities and equipment and provides students with an excellent study environment. A number of cutting-edge machines and equipment have recently been installed, including a 3D exercise analysis machine, a daily activity simulator and the most advanced optical microscopes. This equipment ensures an environment in which students can perfect their practical skills.

Department of Physical Therapy

The Physical Therapy Department emphasizes a variety of disciplines, including basic medicine, anatomy, physiology, pathology, and kinematics. The department aims to nurture well-rounded physical therapists who are able to work enthusiastically and capably in a wide range of situations in the medical, nursing and welfare fields.

Department of Clinical Laboratory Medicine

The Clinical Laboratory Medicine Department has an advanced educational system in place that focuses on medical teamwork. The goal is to nurture clinical laboratory technicians who can provide appropriate explanations to medical staff and offer necessary advice during detailed examinations. The department aims to assist students with achieving passing scores on the national examination for clinical laboratory technicians.

Department of Occupational Therapy

The Occupational Therapy Department has a broad-ranging curriculum that allows students the opportunity to study in a variety of other fields. Students can learn about anatomy and physiology in the field of medicine, and they can study psychology in such areas as the psychology of persons with disabilities.

Department of Nursing

The Nursing Department is committed to helping students build a solid foundation of knowledge and practical skills through continuous exercises and training. Working collaboratively in groups is highly encouraged, fostering independent learning through joint projects. In addition, students are given the chance to work independently in the training room, which helps them develop into highly attentive and detail-oriented nurses.

MULTI-LATERAL STUDENT EXCHANGE PROGRAM

Fall Semester

This program is designed for international students who want to gain a thorough and immersive insight into Japanese culture, history, and way of life. For those keen on exploring the essence of modern Japan, BGU's 'Multi-lateral Student Exchange Program' is the perfect choice. Located in central Tokyo, BGU provides students with easy access to further exploration in the heart of Japan.

This program offers classes covering various aspects of contemporary Japan alongside daily Japanese language lessons. Advanced students can join regular BGU classes in Japanese, while all program courses, except language lessons, are taught in English to accommodate all students.

The students' learning experiences extend beyond the classroom. They can engage in English-based activities at Bunkyo's junior and senior high schools, interact with children at the kindergarten, and take part in cultural events like the Nezu Shrine festival and kimono experiences with local community members. This offers them a unique and personal insight into Japan.

On campus, exchange students have the chance to connect with BGU students, engage in student clubs, homestays, language partnerships, and take part in fun events such as Halloween and Christmas parties. The dormitory's close proximity to the campus ensures that students feel linked to both BGU and the Bunkyo community. While the program emphasizes discovering modern Japan, living in the dormitory offers a distinctive international experience. Students from various countries including Malaysia, China, Bulgaria, Turkey, Canada, Uzbekistan, Kazakhstan, and the U.S. come together to interact, cook, relax, and live in a diverse international environment.

The Road of Eurasian Civilizations (REC) Program

The REC program, initiated in 2010 during the 20th anniversary of Bunkyo Gakuin University, is a comprehensive endeavor designed to coordinate an educational expedition for the university's students. The project is set to be completed in 2024, aligning with the institution's centennial anniversary.

The primary objective of this initiative is to strengthen ties with the Eurasian continent by facilitating cultural interactions, nurturing connections, and enriching global awareness. Through firsthand experiences in Eurasia, students are given the chance to develop a more extensive global mindset. The enduring partnership between our university and Eurasian collaborators will continue to do student exchange programs between institutions.

BUNKYO GLOBAL CAREER INSTITUTE (GCI)

A course that spans across departments, aimed at equipping students for the global arena.

Hongo Campus | Fujimino Campus

In response to the increasing international expansion of Japanese companies, the Bunkyo Global Career Institute (GCI) was founded to prepare students for success in the modern job market. The four-year program, established in 2013, offers students additional courses in international business, cross-cultural communication, and Global English alongside their chosen degree program.

Experience Different Cultures in Asia

The GCI program offers first-year students the opportunity to study abroad in Malaysia, Thailand, or China, focusing on language, cross-cultural understanding, and visits to Japanese companies. This experience boosts motivation, enhances curiosity, and provides a better understanding of Japan's role in Asia, helping students refine their future goals.

Second-year GCI students can participate in the Global Internship program. This program offers them the chance to collaborate with Japanese companies overseas or foreign companies in Japan, providing them with a diverse perspective that goes beyond their first-year study abroad experience.

Find the Confidence to Express Yourself in Global English

The GCI program focuses on Global English, reflecting how non-native English speakers incorporate their own language tendencies into English. The curriculum teaches "plain English" for better cross-cultural understanding, while students can engage in diverse conversations at the university's chat lounge.

DORMITORIES AND ACCOMMODATIONS

Hongo Campus

BGU offers fully furnished dormitories with two kitchens and laundry facilities for international students, fostering a diverse cultural experience.
